

Dear The Colorado State House, The Colorado State Senate, and Governor John Hickenlooper,

We are pleased to present you with this petition affirming one simple statement:

"State laws allow insurance companies to advertise that they're selling insurance coverage that will replace people's homes and possessions if they're damaged or destroyed. But after a loss, insurers apply depreciation formulas and require proof that items have been replaced before they'll pay full value. Because of these formulas and requirements, most people never collect the full replacement cost value of damaged and destroyed property from their insurance company after a loss. In states that have a "valued policy law" on the books, disaster victims can recover replacement cost value more quickly and expeditiously. Implement a valued policy law in Colorado!"

Attached is a list of individuals who have added their names to this petition, as well as additional comments written by the petition signers themselves.

Sincerely,
Dale Snyder

It is a travesty that state officials will support legislation on modifying the behavior of gun usage but do nothing to modify the egregious, wonton, and verifiable actions by the insurance cabal in our state.

It is so important to get the insurance laws changed in Colorado. I'm sure that most people in the state don't understand what is really covered with their insurance in the event of a major or total loss. Our legislature needs to think about what is fair for homeowners and not let the insurance lobby scare them into thinking that the insurance rates will go through the roof if they change the current laws. I know people whose homes were destroyed in both the 4-mile fire and the high park fire and the process is awful and the homeowners don't recover the value of what they lost. The state needs to put the burden on the insurance companies to make sure they are insuring peoples homes correctly. Almost every year my insurance company raises the amount that my house should be insured for but if it was destroyed they would only pay me a fraction of what it is insured for unless I rebuilt my home. I don't think people should be required to rebuild or purchase the items that were destroyed to fully recover the value that their home and possessions were insured for. People should have the option to reevaluate their lives and determine what is the best course for them after a loss and be able to move forward and not spend months or years debating with the insurance company.

Too many of my neighbors suffered home and building losses. It is cruel and wrong to make them list everything they owned for insurance, particularly when that itemization was not required at the time the policy was issued. It has taken way too much time just to itemize food items in a lost fridge, but having to do that for the whole home is unimaginable. People should be able to get enough money back to rebuild and replace their homes and belongings without the added insult of making a ridiculous itemized list. Please make it better for homeowners by implementing the Valued Policy Law. It's sad it will not help those currently suffering, but at least we can help those in the future. Thank you!

As a homeowner who lost his home in the High Park fire I urge you to support this bill. We have enough to deal with without itemizing everything we own. We paid a premium (computed by the insurance company) for a certain amount of property and it's a total loss. There's no reason why the insurance company shouldn't just pay us the policy maximum.

There is no excuse for Insurance Companies to promise, or imply a promise, of coverage while factually providing something very different. The fine print legalese language of insurance contracts should not be used as a means to deceive those who purchase insurance. If insurance companies has collected the premiums, then they should be required to pay the insurance value, in full, when a home is lost or destroyed.

In the wake of a complete loss of a home, the process should be smooth and free of itemized detailing. I own two businesses in Colorado a commercial property as well as a home. I was disturbed to learn of the process in which a total loss creates for the victims. I believe this is an unnecessary business practice that should be adjusted as soon as possible legally. If a customer is purchasing an insured value of structure and item replacement, in the aftermath of a disaster and total loss of property, the process should be as mentally and emotionally non taxing as possible. The post process currently in place creates social factors that are not only draining on the individual but are taxing on the local community. When an individual has done their due diligence in insuring themselves responsibly as well as financially contributing to this insurance, they should be able to collect through a swift and fair process. IF the insurance companies are unsure of the values they are paying out they should then require these listings on the front side of providing the insurance with monthly or quarterly opportunities for clients to update their lists of assets they wish to be insured in their homes so that the burden of listing already exists and there are no questionable issues post client loss. It is heartbreaking to see members of our community still suffering after such a tragic event. I hope that these efforts can provide fair and balanced resolution to this unfortunate issue. I urge our representatives to please act on your communities behalf to make the changes necessary to avoid these hardships in the future. Thank you for your time and we all appreciate your service to our great state.

After seeing my sister's house burned to the ground after the High Park fire, I was thankful she had full replacement insurance--only not so fast, my sister now needs to come up with lists of every item in her home, date purchased, brand etc., also the insurance company offered her 50K less than what she insured it for and a good 150K less than the cost to rebuild.

In a 100% catastrophic loss, this seems a clear cut case of humane treatment to policy holders. IT will also hold the insurance companies to due diligence on coverage limits and due diligence informationally to their policy holders. Thank You Lost my home in the 2012 High Park Fire

I spent 30 years as a property claim adjuster. Not all claim reps nor their companies handle claims in a uniform manner. I have heard stories of requirements of some companies and claim reps, although allowed by insurance policies that have put undue burden on the insured. A uniform valued policy law would relieve those burdens on someone that has just had their world turned upside down. There is a remedy to this anguish. Put yourself in this circumstance and ask "How would I like to be treated in this tragedy?" You have the power to make changes. We all ask you exercise that power for the people you truly represent, the citizens of the State of Colorado.
