Junior Livestock Sale makes its Internet Debut

2008 Colorado State Fair Junior Livestock Sale presented by Colorado's Touchstone Energy Cooperatives is making its internet debut this year.

For the first time ever the Colorado State Fair Junior Livestock Sale will be broadcast live on the internet. "We are very happy that Coloradoans who are unable to make it to the fairgrounds will be able to participate live with their loved ones who are here at the sale, and results will be available nearly instantaneously," said Jeanne Robison, Colorado State Fair Livestock Manager.

The 2007 Junior Livestock Sale was a record breaking year, posting a total of over $412,000. "Last year the involvement from the community and our buyer groups was tremendous," stated Chris Wiseman, Colorado State Fair General Manager, "This year we hope to continue that commitment to youth in agriculture." The addition of the live webcast and instant online results will only further community involvement in this important event.

A link will be available on the Colorado State Fair homepage that will lead directly to the live webcast. Tentative results and totals will be available online as they are determined at the sale.
