

Amended Returns -- How to Amend a Return

How do I amend my Colorado income tax return?

If you filed your Colorado income tax return on paper or electronically, you must use an amended return to change or correct the filing. Filing a corrected original return will not correct your return and may cause serious problems on your income tax account.

You must use a paper form to amend your return. It is not possible to amend your return electronically. The return can be filed any time after you have filed your original return, but no later than the statute of limitations expires, which is usually four years from the due date of the original return.

The amended return for individuals is the 104X.

The amended return for corporations is the 112X.

To amend a partnership or fiduciary return, see the 105 or 106 booklet for instructions.

To obtain these forms for the appropriate tax year that you need to amend, see our Tax Forms Web site and select the tax year you need.
