

Dana Shea-Reid

Dana Shea-Reid has more than twenty years of experience in public sector human resources administration having worked for Colorado municipalities since 1982. For an additional 4 years, she was an independent consultant with Shea Resources, LLC, providing human resources and management consulting to private, public and non-profit employers. She is currently working under contract with the United States Department of Labor for the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program (EEOICP).

In addition to an extensive knowledge of personnel policies and employment law, Dana has broad experience in grievance procedures and pre-disciplinary hearings for classified employees and employees governed by collective bargaining agreements. She has conducted numerous fact-finding investigations and has written extensive reports on findings and final recommendations. Dana has served as an assessor in police and fire promotional assessment centers and has also assisted agencies in developing internal assessment centers for hiring and promotions.

Dana received her Bachelor's degree from the University of New Mexico and completed 42 hours of graduate coursework at the University of Colorado-Denver Graduate School of Public Affairs. She retained professional certifications with the Society of Human Resource Management (SHRM) and the International Association of Public Management-Human Resources (IPMA-HR). Dana served as a board member and past president for the Colorado chapter of IPMA and served with the national association as a member of the communications task force and the editorial board. She was selected to represent the IPMA-HR at an international conference in Brighton, England, sponsored by the United Kingdom's Society of Chief Personnel Officials.

Dana has served as a board member, human resources chair and volunteer for Family Tree, Inc., is a continuing member of the scholarship review committee for the Daniels Fund, and is a founding board member of the Colorado Women's Hall of Fame. On June 5, 2007, Governor Bill Ritter, Jr. appointed Dana to the State Personnel Board for the term of July 1, 2007, to June 30, 2012.
