Mr. Barrett,

I am writing to inform you that I am granting your application for a pardon.

Of the hundreds of applications for pardons my office has received over the years, yours is one of the few I am granting. I am doing so because you have demonstrated your commitment to moving past your criminal history and starting anew, while taking with you the lessons you have learned throughout your life.

Many people with criminal histories desire a second chance, and you have earned one. Since your conviction more than 30 years ago, you have worked hard to make a life for you and your family. Despite your best efforts to move on from this, it has weighed on your mind. I hope with this pardon you can have a fresh start. It is now up to you to make the most of this opportunity. It will require hard work and dedication, and will involve many challenges along the way. I believe you have it in you to move beyond past mistakes.

Since completing your sentence, you have demonstrated your capacity to live a productive life. By continuing down this path, you will improve not only your life, but also the lives of your family and community members. Others who have experienced circumstances similar to yours will look to you for guidance and inspiration. Show them how it's done.

Good luck to you.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Richards,

I am writing to inform you that I am granting your application for a pardon.

Of the hundreds of applications for pardons my office has received over the years, yours is one of the few I am granting. I am doing so because you have demonstrated your commitment to moving past your criminal history and starting anew, while taking with you the lessons learned throughout your life.

Many people with criminal histories desire a second chance, and you have earned one. Nearly 30 years ago, you pleaded guilty to your crime. Since then, you have lived a clean life. However, your opportunities have been hindered by your criminal history. I hope this pardon will create that fresh opportunity. It will require hard work and dedication, and you will likely encounter challenges along the way. I believe you have it in you to move beyond past mistakes.

Since completing your sentence, you have demonstrated your capacity to live a productive life. By continuing down this path, you will improve not only your life, but also the lives of your family and community members. Others who have experienced circumstances similar to yours will look to you for guidance and inspiration. Show them how it’s done.

Good luck to you.

Many people with criminal histories desire a second chance, and you have earned one. Following your convictions, you worked hard to build a life for yourself, eventually starting your own company. You are a dedicated member of your church, and constantly work to better the lives of your friends and family.

Since completing your sentences, you have demonstrated your capacity to live a productive life. Others who have experienced circumstances similar to yours will look to you for guidance and inspiration. Show them how it’s done.

Good luck to you.

Sincerely,

John Hickenlooper
Governor
