
GAMING INDUSTRY BULLETIN

5

June 8, 1992

The Division of Gaming does not endorse, nor is required to test or regulate, any accounting/slot monitoring software packages currently in use by various casinos.

The burden is placed on the casino to ensure the software program operates effectively and correctly in compliance with all internal control requirements. If the software fails to meet this standard the casino still must meet the internal control requirements even if this must be done manually.

All casinos are required to be fully aware of specific information that is required by the Division. Failure by the software to generate this information may be considered a violation and the respective casino may be fined accordingly for noncompliance.

Once again, the Division of Gaming is not reviewing, and has not given its approval of, any software systems at this time.