Building and Other Codes

The Applicant is advised that Mineral County has not adopted the International Building Code, the Uniform Building Code, and the National Fire Code, the Uniform Plumbing Code, the Uniform Electrical Code or any other nationally recognized codes adopted in many other jurisdictions. In addition and not by way of limitation, certain Colorado Statutes may now or will hereafter apply to the structure, including, but not by way of limitation, CRS 30-28-201 et seq. (Energy efficiency) and CRS 38-45-101 et seq. (carbon monoxide detectors). If Colorado legislation is adopted, fire suppression sprinkler and other systems may be required in all new construction. Some of the purposes of state codes and statutes are to ensure public safety, health and welfare in general, safe, high quality construction, including flood hazard problems, foundation adequacy, structural integrity, roof load bearing capacity and many other aspects of construction. Even though not adopted by the County or State, it is legally possible to make one or more or parts or all of these codes applicable to your construction by requiring your Contractor to comply with them in a construction contract. The total cost of construction will increase by requiring compliance with certain codes and the use of a private inspector of the plans and
