SEX OFFENSES IN COLORADO CRIMINAL LAW

There are several categories of sex offenses in Colorado law. Some offenses are subject to lifetime supervision sentencing provisions for sex offenders, and some are not. Also, some of these offenses are subject to sex offender registration requirements, and some are not.

Table 1 lists all sex offenses, and Table 2 lists only sex offenses against children. They both include:

- a brief description of the offense;
- the misdemeanor or felony level of offense;
- the normal presumptive sentence range for the offense;
- whether the offense is considered a crime of violence; and
- whether the offense is subject to lifetime supervision sentencing provisions and sex offender registration requirements.

The following categories of sex offenses are included in both tables:

- offenses against the person (sex assaults, enticement, and unlawful sexual contact);
- offenses involving the family relations (incest, and trafficking, exploitation, and procurement of children);
- wrongs to at-risk adults and at-risk juveniles (sex assaults); and
- offenses relating to morals (prostitution, pimping, indecent exposure, and sexually explicit materials harmful to children).

Any crime of violence that is a class 3 through 6 felony or a class 1 misdemeanor presents an extraordinary risk of harm to society. The maximum sentence in the normal presumptive range for extraordinary risk crimes is increased by 4 years for class 3 felonies, 2 years for class 4 felonies, 1 year for class 5 felonies, and 6 months for class 6 felonies and class 1 misdemeanors.

THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS AND SENTENCING PROVISIONS FOR SEX OFFENSES

What is the Statute of Limitations for Sex Offenses?

The Colorado statute of limitations (Section 16-5-401, C.R.S) requires prosecution for criminal offenses to commence within a set period of time. The time period is different, depending on the specific crime and its circumstances. Murder, kidnaping, treason, specified sex offenses against children, and forgery have no time limit for commencement of prosecution. Most other felonies must be prosecuted within three years of the commission of the crime. The time limit is suspended for up to five years while an offender is absent from the state of Colorado.

Felony sex offenses. Sex offenses, especially those committed against children, have their own categories of limitations to prosecution. The time period during which an individual may be prosecuted for a felony sex offense is ten years after the commission of the crime.

Sex offenses against children. There is no statute of limitations for specified sex offenses against children.¹ For the felony offenses of sexual assault and unlawful sexual contact when the victim is under the age of 18 at the time of the offense, prosecution must commence within ten years after the victim reaches the age of 18. Prosecution for felony failure to register as a sex offender against children must commence within three years of the commission of the crime.

Misdemeanor sex offenses. Prosecution of misdemeanor offenses for unlawful sexual contact must be commenced within five years of the commission of the crime, but if the victim is a child under fifteen years of age, then prosecution must commence within eight and a half years. All other misdemeanor sex offenses must be prosecuted within 18 months of the commission of the crime.

DNA exception. In a case where a sex offense is reported to law enforcement officials within ten years of the commission of the crime and the identity of the offender is determined by DNA evidence, there is no time limit for commencing prosecution.

What are the Sentencing Provisions for Sex Offenses?

The penalty for any criminal offense depends on the class of crime. An offense may include several different classes of crime, depending on the specific circumstances. The crime classification level for each of Colorado's sex offenses is listed in Table 1. The sentencing requirements for each crime classification level are listed in Appendix A.

¹Enticement of a child; sexual assault when the victim is less than 15 years of age; felony unlawful sexual contact when the victim is less than 15 years of age; sexual assault on a child; sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust; aggravated incest; human trafficking of a minor for sexual servitude; sexual exploitation of a child; procurement of a child for sexual exploitation; indecent exposure; pandering of a child; procurement of a child; keeping a place of child prostitution; pimping of a child; inducement of child prostitution; patronizing a prostituted child; class 4 felony internet luring of a child; internet sexual exploitation of a child; or criminal attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit any of the specified acts.

Not all individuals who are convicted of a sex offense receive a sentence of incarceration. Some offenders receive deferred prosecution,² deferred sentencing,³ probation, and community corrections. These alternatives can be used at the discretion of the court.

What are the Provisions of Colorado's Lifetime Supervision of Sex Offenders Act?

Colorado Sex Offender Lifetime Supervision Act of 1998. In 1998, the legislature established a law under which individuals who commit sex offenses could receive treatment and supervision for the rest of their lives. In the act's legislative declaration, the General Assembly stated that the majority of individuals who commit these crimes are likely to commit similar crimes in the future if they are not supervised. The highlights of the act's provisions are indeterminate sentencing for certain sex offenders, treatment for sex offenders, and intensive supervision of sex offenders in the community.

Indeterminate sentencing. Under the act, certain sex offenses are subject to special sentencing guidelines. These offenses include:

- sexual assault;
- felony unlawful sexual contact;
- sexual assault on a child;
- sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust;
- aggravated sexual assault on a client by a psychotherapist;
- enticement of a child;
- incest;
- aggravated incest;
- patronizing a prostituted child;
- class 4 felony Internet luring of a child
- Internet sexual exploitation of a child; and
- sexual assaults that include sexual intrusion or sexual penetration when the victim is less than 12 years old and the offender is at least 18 years old and at least 10 years older than the victim.

The special sentencing guidelines for these offenses include the following:

- Courts may sentence sex offenders to an indeterminate prison term of at least the minimum of the presumptive range for the offense and a maximum of the offender's natural life;
- Individuals who commit offenses that constitute a crime of violence⁴ may be sentenced to an indeterminate prison term of at least the midpoint of the presumptive range for the specific offense and a maximum of the offender's natural life;

²In a deferred prosecution, charges against a defendant are dismissed after successful completion of court-ordered probation.

³In deferred sentencing, the defendant is allowed to withdraw a guilty plea and charges are dismissed after successful completion of court-ordered probation.

⁴Any sexual offense during which the offender used threat, intimidation, or force against the victim, or caused bodily harm to the victim.

- Habitual sex offenders against children and HIV-positive individuals, who were aware of their HIV-positive status prior to committing a sex offense, may be sentenced to an indeterminate prison sentence of at least three times the upper limit of the presumptive range for the specific offense and a maximum of the offender's natural life;
- For those who are older than 18 and commit certain sexual assaults that include sexual intrusion or sexual penetration of a victim who is less than 12 years old and at least 10 years younger than the offender, the sentencing scheme is as follows:

Level of Offense	Minimum Sentence	Maximum Sentence
Class 2 felony	24-48 years	Offender's natural life
Class 3 felony	18-32 years	Offender's natural life
Class 4 felony	10-16 years	Offender's natural life

Treatment. Sex offenders who are involved in the criminal justice system are required to undergo appropriate treatment as part of any sentence to probation, community corrections, incarceration, or parole. Offenders involved in the system are subject to evaluation and identification to determine what treatment is appropriate. Recommendations from the Department of Corrections (DOC), the Judicial Department, the Department of Human Services, and the Division of Criminal Justice are considered in the evaluation and identification process. It is the responsibility of the Sex Offender Management Board (SOMB) to create a procedure for the evaluation and identification of sex offenders, as well as to certify treatment facilities and personnel.

Supervision of probationers. Probation is a sentencing option that diverts offenders convicted of various nonviolent crimes from prison or jail. Probationers are supervised by a probation officer within the Colorado Judicial Branch. Courts are authorized to sentence sex offenders to probation for an indeterminate period of time unless the individuals are convicted of a crime of violence or are considered habitual offenders against children. In those cases, the offender must be sentenced to incarceration for an indeterminate period of time, as explained above. The indeterminate probation scheme is as follows:

Level of Offense	Minimum Probation Period	Maximum Probation Period
Class 2 felony	20 years	Offender's natural life
Class 3 felony	20 years	Offender's natural life
Class 4 felony	10 years	Offender's natural life
Crime of violence	Probation not an option
Habitual sex offender	Probation not an option

Any sex offender who is sentenced to probation is required to participate in an "intensive supervision probation program" for an indeterminate period of time as a condition of probation.⁵ The offenders in the intensive program must receive the highest level of supervision available to probationers. The court also has the option to sentence a sex offender to a residential community corrections program for a minimum period of time, to be specified by the court. At the end of the minimum period, the offender may or may not be released to the intensive supervision probation program, at the discretion of the court.

⁵Section 18-1.3-1004 (2)(a), C.R.S.

Supervision of parolees. The DOC has established an intensive supervision program for sex offenders who have served a prison term and have subsequently been released on parole. Sex offenders who appear before the parole board may be required, as a condition of parole, to participate in the supervision program. Any individual who is convicted of failure to register as a sex offender is also required to participate.

The supervision program for parolees or probationers is designed to minimize risk to the public, to the greatest extent possible, and may include:

- severely limited activities;
- daily contact between the sex offender and the parole or probation officer;
- monitored curfew;
- home visitation;
- electronic monitoring;
- employment visitation and monitoring;
- drug and alcohol screening;
- treatment referrals and monitoring; and
- payment of restitution.

Conditions for release on parole. Each sex offender who has completed the minimum period of an indeterminate sentence is entitled to a hearing of the parole board. The parole board determines whether or not a sex offender may be released on parole. In making that determination, the board considers whether the sex offender has successfully progressed in treatment, whether the individual would present an undue risk to the community, and whether there is a strong and reasonable probability that the individual will repeat the crime. Pursuant to state law, the board uses the Parole Board Administrative Release Guideline Instrument to guide its decisions.

A parolee's supervision level is subject to reduction by the offender's parole officer at any time. The parole officer may also return a sex offender to the intensive supervision parole program if the parole officer believes that an increased level of supervision is necessary to protect the public safety.

REGISTRATION AND SEX OFFENDERS IN THE COMMUNITY

The Sex Offender Registration Act (Sections 16-22-101 through 16-22-114, C.R.S.) was enacted in 2002. Definitions of the sex offense classifications used in the act are listed in Appendix B.

Who must register? Colorado law requires the registration of any person who is a temporary or permanent resident of Colorado and who:

- was convicted on or after July 1, 1991, of an unlawful sexual offense or enticement of a child in the state of Colorado, internet luring of a child, or an equivalent offense in another state or jurisdiction (see Appendix B for definitions of these offenses);
- was released on or after July 1, 1991, from the corrections department in Colorado or any other state, having served a sentence for an unlawful sexual offense, enticement of a child, Internet luring of a child, or an equivalent offense in another state or jurisdiction;
- was convicted on or after July 1, 1994, in the state of Colorado of unlawful sexual behavior (see Appendix B for the definition of this offense) or of another offense, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior;
- is released from the custody of the Colorado Department of Corrections (DOC) on or after July 1, 1994, after serving a sentence for unlawful sexual behavior or for another offense, the underlying factual basis of which involved unlawful sexual behavior;
- is convicted of an offense in any other state or jurisdiction for which the person is required to register in the state or jurisdiction of conviction, or for which such person would be required to register if convicted in Colorado;
- receives a disposition or is adjudicated a juvenile delinquent for committing any act that may constitute unlawful sexual behavior; or
- receives a deferred juvenile adjudication for committing any act that may constitute unlawful sexual behavior.

For the purpose of sex offender registration, any person from another state who occupies a dwelling in Colorado, including a hotel or motel, for more than 14 days in any 30-day period is considered a temporary resident. Sex offenders who live in another state but work or go to school in Colorado are considered temporary residents. The term “other jurisdictions” includes, but is not limited to, military, tribal, territorial, or federal jurisdictions. Sex offenders who are convicted and sentenced in Colorado but move to another state upon their release must register in that state.

A court can exempt a sex offender from the registration requirements if the person meets certain guidelines (e.g., the person was under the age of 18 at the time of the commission of the act), and the court determines that the requirement would be unfairly punitive and that exempting the sex offender from the registration requirement would not pose a significant risk to the community. Prior to making a decision to exempt a sex offender from the registration requirement, the court must give the prosecuting attorney and the victim a chance to be heard at a hearing.

Who notifies sex offenders of the requirement to register? DOC personnel, county sheriffs, judges or magistrates, and probation and parole officers must notify sex offenders upon conviction or release from custody of their duty to register with local law enforcement in each and any jurisdiction in which they reside in the United States. In addition, Division of Youth Corrections personnel must notify juvenile sex offenders under their jurisdiction of the duty to register.

Where and when do sex offenders register? Sex offenders must register with either the local chief of police or county sheriff in each and any jurisdiction in which they reside, whether in Colorado, another state, or in multiple locations. The Colorado Bureau of Investigation (CBI) maintains the statewide sex offender registry in Colorado.

Registration must occur within five business days of one of the following: (1) release into the community under criminal justice supervision (e.g., probation, parole, community corrections); (2) notice of the requirement to register, if not incarcerated but sentenced directly to community supervision; or (3) establishment of temporary, permanent, or secondary residence(s) in the state. In addition to these requirements, sex offenders who are subject to lifetime registration must re-register three months after their release into the community, and every three months thereafter. Sex offenders who are released from prison in Colorado or another state with no further supervision must register the next business day following their release. Sex offenders are required to cancel their registration in a jurisdiction if they move to another state; sex offenders who move to a different address within Colorado must register at their new address, including information on the former address where the sex offender will no longer reside.

What information must sex offenders provide upon registration? When registering, a sex offender must provide the following on a standardized form prepared by CBI:

- name, including any and all legal names or aliases;
- date of birth;
- address;
- vehicle information for any motor vehicle owned or leased;
- place of employment;
- a current photograph; and
- a full set of fingerprints.

Sex offenders who are temporary residents of Colorado must also provide their address in their state of permanent residence and their place of employment in Colorado. Sex offenders who are employed at, are enrolled in, or volunteer for an institution of higher education must provide the name and address of the institution, and all addresses and locations at which the person may be physically located at the institution. Any sex offender whose place of residence is a trailer or motor home is required to register the address at which the trailer or motor home will be lawfully located. Motor vehicles may not be listed a place of residence.

Offenders convicted of a child sex crime are required to also provide all e-mail addresses, instant messaging identities, and chat room identities prior to being used by the offender.

What if the offender lacks a fixed residence? A person lacks a fixed residence when that person does not have a living situation that meets the statutory definition of residence. Examples include, but are not limited to, outdoor sleeping locations or any public or private locations not designed as traditional living accommodations; or temporary public or private housing, temporary shelter facilities, residential treatment facilities, or any other residential program or facility if the person remains at the location for less than fourteen days.

All local law enforcement agencies are required to accept a registration from an offender who lacks a fixed residence unless it includes a residence or location that violates state law or local ordinance. A person who lacks a fixed residence may register in any jurisdiction. Offenders required to register annually and who lack a fixed residence must register every three months; offenders required to register quarterly or every three months and who lack a fixed residence must register at least every month.

How often and under what conditions are sex offenders required to re-register? Sex offenders must re-register annually on their birthday. In addition, sex offenders must re-register any time they change addresses, establish additional residences, or legally change their name. If a trailer or motor home is moved to another location, it is the sex offender's responsibility to update his or her registration information. If the sex offender ceases to reside at an address and lacks a fixed address, the offender must update his or her registration. Offenders required to register annually and who lack a fixed residence must register every three months and when they cease to lack a fixed residence.

Sex offenders who are employed at, are enrolled in, or volunteer for an institution of higher education must re-register when they begin studying or working at an institution as an employee, student, or volunteer, and upon any change in work status or location at the institution. If convicted of a child sex crime, the offender must update any e-mail addresses, instant messaging identities, and chat room identities that are required to be registered.

Certain sex offenders must register every three months for the remainder of their lives, including any person who is:

- designated a sexually violent predator;
- convicted in Colorado as an adult of any of the following: (1) felony sexual assault, or first degree felony sexual assault or second degree felony sexual assault, as they existed prior to July 1, 2000; (2) sexual assault on a child; (3) sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust; (4) sexual assault on a client by a psychotherapist; (5) incest; or (6) aggravated incest;
- convicted in another state or jurisdiction of an offense for which a person in that state or jurisdiction must register quarterly; or
- convicted of an offense in another state or jurisdiction that would require the person to register if the conviction occurred in Colorado.

Offenders required to register quarterly or every three months and who lack a fixed residence must register at least every month.

Is there a cost to register? Local law enforcement agencies may establish a registration fee to be paid upon the initial registration and required subsequent registrations. The fee must reflect actual agency costs, but the maximum permitted initial registration fee is $75, and the maximum permitted fee for subsequent registrations is $25. Fees may be waived for indigent persons and agencies are required to accept a timely registration in all circumstances, even if the person is unable to pay the fee at the time of registration.

Can a sex offender ever be removed from the registry? Sexually violent predators and sex offenders who are subject to lifetime registration cannot be removed from the registry. Other sex offenders can petition the court to discontinue their registration or the posting of their information on the Internet, as long as they have not subsequently received a disposition for, been adjudicated a juvenile delinquent for, or been otherwise convicted of any sexual offense. Depending on the offense for which they were convicted or factors surrounding the disposition of their case, sex offenders are eligible to request removal from the registry anywhere from the time they successfully complete their sentence to 20 years after their final release from the jurisdiction of the court. Appendix C contains a table showing when and under what conditions sex offenders are first eligible to petition for removal from the sex offender registry. In certain cases, courts may notify the victim of an offense when an offender petitions for removal.

What are the penalties for failing to register as a sex offender? Failure to register as a sex offender or submitting false information on a registration form is punishable by confinement in prison or jail, a fine, or both. The offenses and penalties for failure to register as a sex offender in Colorado are listed in Table 1 of this report.

Offenders who lack a fixed residence and who do not register every one or three months, as required, are subject to prosecution for the unclassified misdemeanor of failure to verify location, defined in Section 18-3-416.2, C.R.S. Failure to verify location is punishable by up to 30 days in jail, and up to one year in jail for a third or subsequent offense.

Is the public notified when sex offenders are released into the community? Community notification is only mandated for sexually violent predators.¹ The law contains a legislative declaration from the General Assembly stating its desire to mandate community notification only in cases involving the highest degree of risk to the community, and its belief that such notification should only occur under carefully controlled circumstances.

The SOMB, which is administered by the Colorado Department of Public Safety, establishes criteria under which a sexually violent predator is subject to community notification. The board also develops the protocols and procedures for community notification, which local law enforcement agencies must follow. The procedures require that notification be as specific as possible to the population within the community that is at risk. Because there is wide variation in the size, population, law enforcement resources, and technological capabilities of local jurisdictions across the state, the board develops several procedures and permits local jurisdictions to select the most appropriate one. Thus, the procedures that are used at the local level vary in accordance with the size, population, and resources of each jurisdiction.

Local law enforcement agencies are required to conduct local notification when a sexually violent predator is released into their jurisdiction. If there is a change to the sexually violent predator's status that might put another area of the community at risk, such as the sex offender's establishment of a new residence or place of employment, an additional notification may be necessary.

What information about sex offenders can be released to the public? Colorado law contains a legislative declaration from the General Assembly stating that the public must have access to information concerning sex offenders so that they can protect themselves and their children. However, the legislative declaration also states that in making the information available to the public, it is not the intent of the General Assembly that the information be used to inflict retribution or additional punishment on any convicted sex offender.

Anyone in Colorado may request information about sex offenders, regardless of where they live. When requested, local law enforcement agencies may, but are not required to, release the following information about a sex offender, at a minimum:

- name, address or addresses, and aliases of the person;
- the person's date of birth;
- a photograph of the person, if requested and readily available; and
- the conviction resulting in the person's duty to register.

If a local law enforcement agency denies the request for this information by a person who lives outside its jurisdiction, the agency may forward the request to CBI, which must provide the information to the person who has requested it. Information about victims is not permitted to be released.

Is information about sex offenders available on the Internet? CBI is required to post on the Internet a list of sex offenders who are:

- sexually violent predators under the laws of Colorado or another state;
- persons who are required to register and have been convicted of two or more of the following offenses: (1) felony unlawful sexual behavior, or (2) a crime of violence; and
- persons who are required to register because of a felony conviction as an adult, but have failed to register.

In addition, the CBI may post on the Internet a list of felony sex offenders. The lists of sex offenders posted by CBI are to include the sex offender's name, physical description, and address. Physical description includes the person's sex, height, weight, any identifying characteristics, and photograph. The CBI website can be accessed at: <https://www.colorado.gov/apps/cdps/sor/>.

Local law enforcement agencies may post on the Internet registration information about sex offenders on their registration list, if the sex offender is:

- an adult convicted of a felony sex offense;
- an adult convicted of a second or subsequent offense of any of the following: (1) sexual assault; (2) unlawful sexual contact; (3) sexual assault on a client; (4) sexual exploitation of a child by possession of sexually exploitive material; (5) indecent exposure; or (6) sexual conduct in a correctional institution;
- a juvenile adjudicated for two or more offenses involving unlawful sexual behavior or for a crime of violence; or
- a juvenile who is required to register following adjudication for an offense that would have been a felony, if committed by an adult, and has failed to register.

Any law enforcement agency that posts sex offender registration information on a public website must also post educational information concerning protection from sex offenders or provide a link to the educational information included on the CBI website. Educational material posted on the Internet is to be developed by local law enforcement agencies, in cooperation with the SOMB and sexual assault victims' advocacy groups. Arapahoe, Boulder, El Paso, Jefferson, Larimer, and Weld counties, among others, currently post information about sex offenders online.

Are sex offenders restricted from living within a certain distance from areas or facilities frequented by children? Colorado law does not restrict sex offenders from living within a certain proximity of schools, parks, or other areas frequented by children.

Under Section 16-11.7-103 (4)(g), C.R.S., the SOMB is charged with evaluating, adopting guidelines, and making recommendations to the legislature about the residency location of sex offenders in the community, particularly in relation to schools and child care facilities. The board sets guidelines for community supervision of sex offenders. The guidelines prohibit sex offenders from being near schoolyards, parks, playgrounds, swimming pools, arcades, or other places frequented by children. The guidelines also prohibit contact with children without prior approval. However, the guidelines do not specify a distance that sex offenders must stay away from schools, parks, or other areas frequented by children. A sex offender's parole or probation officer uses the guidelines to approve the location of the sex offender's residence.

Pursuant to statutory requirements, the board published a report in March 2004 on safety issues raised by living arrangements for and location of sex offenders in the community. Highlights of the board's findings are listed below.

- Few sex offenders in the board's sample study of 130 sex offenders were living within 1,000 feet of a school or child care center. (The study did not quantify the number of sex offenders who lived within 1,000 feet of a school or child care center.)
- It is almost impossible in densely populated areas for a sex offender to find a residence that is not close in proximity to a school or child care facility. Regulating the location of sex offender residences is not guaranteed to keep them from re-offending, and should not be used as a means to control sex offender recidivism.

Treatment and surveillance were found to be better tools for community supervision of sex offenders than regulating where sex offenders may reside.
