MONTROSE WORKFORCE CENTER TO OFFER FREE SEMINAR ON EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION

Session will provide useful information to workers and businesses alike

(MONTROSE) – On Wednesday, April 20, the Workforce Center in Montrose will offer a free seminar to provide workers and business owners with the basics of Colorado’s employment discrimination laws.

The seminar is a joint effort by the Department of Labor and Employment and the Colorado Civil Rights Division and will underscore the most important information people need regarding this topic, delivered in a way that makes learning firmly retained, easily recalled and immediately applicable.

Workers and employers alike can gain an understanding of what constitutes employment discrimination in this two hour session. Among the topics covered in this seminar will be an overview of protected classes, an overview of discriminatory harassment and discrimination, the rights and responsibilities of employers and employees and a segment on sexual harassment in the workplace.
